

MORTALIS: REALMS

Campaign Storyboard

One survivor. Fifteen realms. One tyrant to answer for the ash.

The Call to Adventure

You are the last soul to walk out of your village alive. At dusk, Azhûl the Ash-Crowned came with fire and left only ash and silence. You are no chosen one — just a survivor with a grudge and a small band of cards left behind by travellers who once passed through your home: a few Dawn-knights, storm-wolves, and wandering clerics.

That is enough to begin. Azhûl's power reaches into all fifteen realms through his lieutenants — warlords, priests, brokers, and kings who serve him out of fear, greed, or oaths. To reach him, you must cross every realm, cut down each lieutenant, and grow from a nobody into the one thing that can end him. The road is a mystery; you only ever see the next step. At its end waits the Red Gate.

How the quest plays: each chapter is a realm with six duels against its warriors, then its lieutenant. Duels drip out that realm's common and uncommon cards; beating the lieutenant unlocks a Rare (or an Ultra-Rare every third chapter), plus coins and Seals for the store. You begin with only the three starter realms and can build decks solely from what you've unlocked — so every realm you conquer makes you stronger for the next.

Act I — Finding Your Feet

You have nothing but a starter band of Dawn-knights, storm-wolves, and clerics. Earn allies and your footing among the realms nearest home.
